Male staff Leadership

The knights of Columbus

1. "Leadership, itself, is a service, because leadership, itself, is humility and magnanimity in action."

What are the habits of magnanimity and humility, such that they are a service to others?

Why is this a particularly masculine virtue?

2. "Aristotle said the magnanimous man is a man who knows he is worthy of great things."

Explain this idea as seen through a Christian lens.

3. What is self-mastery?

4. "If you aren't willing to live for it, you probably don't have what it takes to die for it either." Think about your own life, your family, religion, and work. In what ways can you live for – take ownership and leadership for – what you care about most? Give one example of a manner of servant leadership that you would like to improve in.
